Arrests made about the same time by another patrolman and the fact that there was no woman in the car occupied by the five men. led to the belief that they might not have been concerned in the cigar store hold-up.
The police intend to have them looked over by the victims of the robbery, however, and also want to question them concerning the hold-up of a craps game on Allen Street Sunday afternoon, in which robbers got more than $5,000. All five were held by Magistrate Frothingham for examination to-morrow.

Andrus Andersen, whose address has not been learned, was shot and perhaps mortally wounded early yesterday morning by a passenger on a West End train who had drawn a revolver to emphasize his objection to the guard's instructions to leave by the center door. Phillipo Caretti, of 1779 Stillwell Avenue, Coney Island, is under arrest at the Coney Island police station, charged with complicity in the shooting.

Murder in Shadow of Prison

Met by Chance, Name Unknown
Their prisoner told them, they said, that he had no idea who the man was. He had met him, the police say Ciarra told them, at Mulberry Bend Park a day or two ago and by chance they encountered each other again last night. The stranger, the police say Ciarra told them, called him a vile name and he drew his razor and slashed him.

The most relentless questioning of the prisoner failed to shake his story. He had been insulted and he had struck; it happened that he had killed; whom he had killed he did not know, but his victim deserved it. That, the police said, was all they could get from Ciarra.

from Ciarra.

The prisoner said he had a room at a hotel on the Bowery, but inquiries made there failed to reveal any one who would acknowledge knowing him. A Long Island Railroad time table with a pencil mark underlining trains to Edgemere was found in his pocket. Ciarra said he didn't know how he happened to have that.
